

AGE MATTERS IN RELATIONSHIPS ESSAY

They are mature enough to know about having a commitment and are serious in aspects that really matter in relationships. In the other hand.

Some feel that you will eventually fall in love with someone half your age but the thing is how can you tell? It is a personal choice. Whatever the case, it may have happened for a reason. But if you accept your partner whole heartily, then you should be able to adjust pretty well in your relationship and make it work for both of you. Each person we meet has a purpose in our life. It does not matter how ridiculous it may look to other people. If you prefer people much younger or much older than you – suit yourself, and nobody has any rights to tell you off. If this happens, you should take it as a challenge to work harder in your relationship to prove to them that you can handle it and that you love the person you're with regardless of their age. This will depend on how their relationship with an age difference turned out to be. What kind of decisions? There is, of course, the issue of responsibility – older people are usually more responsible and reasonable than younger ones, and may thus treat younger people as not mature enough. Of course, you cannot avoid family and friends who might not be supportive in your relationship. Experts in family relationships believe that if the age gap is not more than 5 years, it will be almost invisible. We often put up walls and flee for the mountains, but before shutting the door on the chance at love, think about your potential lover's maturity level. The woman has to decide whether to obey to his authority and forget about her own development or to rebel and break off the relationship. In other cases, the wider public believes that the relationship is a marriage of convenience. I would definitely write about love. The key is honesty and communication. Actually every person has got their own take on the issue. The most important thing is to maintain a good communication between you and your partner. In fact, to do this is not very easy, as people who are over-thirties usually do not want to change their habits. Many school promote healthy dating habits and relationships within the teen population. However, there are still people who don't believe in that saying. These people take no notice of how many years their partners older or younger are and what their financial status is. Michela Ravasio Maybe he's 30 and you are 20, but he is just as confused about his life as you are about yours. There are many married couples with a very wide age gap between them and have successfully learnt to appreciate each other and not let the age gap work negatively for them. It is not worth mentioning. Women too marry younger husbands for satisfaction. This type of relationships is not the best one because an experienced partner may want to take an advantage of the young person's naivety and innocence. There will in most cases be a lot of protests from friends and family, so opt for something like this only when you are ready to stand against them. Does the age disparity influence the relationship of the couple or not? Some people claim that a woman found a young lover and son in one person. Like with any relationship, if you are happy, have a strong bond and are committed to making it work, then together you can cope with any complication life throws in your direction. It is however clear that if you make age an issue then it will out rightly affect your relationship. As a result, even men who are deep in love can cool down and break off the relationship because jealousy is usually annoying. For instance, at the beginning of the relationship the partner's were 35 and How to cite this page Choose cite format:. Marriages with twenty years age gap or even more become of common occurrence. Many stage and film versions of the novel also appeared. Emotionally stunted? Through the accounts of Tannen, Sanders, and Hughes, they discuss the significance of certain words and the many interpretations conveyed by people of different perspectives. Everyday it seems like most couples break up as fast as they fall in love. There are men who have younger wives and women who have younger husbands. Stopping the problematic behavior before it starts its key.